INVESTMENT STRATEGY

The NESTOR Far East fund primarily invests in stocks of medium-sized companies from Asia such as China, Indonesia, India and Australia. The fund managers Florian Weidinger and Thiam Kon Lim rely on a thematic investment strategy that is independent of the overall market environment. The focus is on long-term investment opportunities, especially in medium-sized companies. Topics include consumer goods and capital goods related to infrastructure in the growing cities. The fund managers pay particular attention to the valuation and corporate governance of the companies, visit them personally and conduct interviews with other investors. Depending on the market situation, the fund invests in a balanced manner across the entire region with a particular focus on the emerging markets. The return/risk profile is designed for the long term. The prerequisite for investing in all securities is that they are listed on a stock exchange or open to the public and that they function properly.

REWARDS

- Participation in growth of the Far East region through investments in growing economic regions like China and India.
- Above-average price increases possible on topics such as industrial consolidation, environmental protection, consumption, infrastructure, etc.
- Smaller stocks tend to go unnoticed by investors (banks), but often offer greater development opportunities.

RISKS

- Protectionist efforts by the USA against China can have a negative impact on economic development.
- Higher volatility than European stocks.
- Exchange rate fluctuations possible.

Note: Due to its composition and the techniques used by the fund management, the fund shows increased volatility, i.e. the unit prices can be subject to greater upward or downward fluctuations within short periods of time. For detailed explanations of the risks, please refer to the current sales prospectus.
